Stephen, I took a look at the web site on Friday. It looks great. I like it. It is easy to navigate and very informative and complete. I understood from Mr. Blackwell during the community meeting that we would be given the opportunity to comment before it went live. For the cc's, the web address is listed below. Following are my comments:

Home Page:

We should discuss whether a disclaimer needs to be included on the home page stating something like, for e.g., "this site is maintained by BNC and not the EPA," or something to that effect since the EPA is mentioned quite frequently, which is good. Maybe Gloria can help us with the proper language or she may decide we don't need a disclaimer.

Welcome Page:

I have attached both orders, along with the signature pages, that should be included on the web site for completeness.

Site Summary Page:

We try to update the Site Status Summary on a monthly basis. Is the link setup to account for these updates?

Updates Page:

We need to be careful with the monthly progress reports and not include data that hasn't been validated, or statements that appear to make final determinations. I didn't see this type of information in the two reports on the web site, but I have seen reports from even our contractors that appear to make final determinations that should be included in the final RI/FS reports.

Updates Page:

I have also attached the other presentations made, by myself and Jessica White, at the scoping meeting that should be included on the web site. I believe that the reference to PCLs in your presentation should not be included on the web site. We will establish federal preliminary remediation goals for the project which may or may not be more stringent than state PCLs. Referencing state PCLs may cause confusion later on in the process for the public, TAG recipient (when granted), and federal and state reviewers. Additionally, they appear to make a final determination.

Thanks and please call me if you have any questions.
